Abstrak
Profitability is the ability of cooperatives to generate income or obtain effective and efficient manner. Profitability on Credit Unions have an important role, in addition to increasing the living standards of the Cooperative, profitability can also prosper society. This study aimed to examine the effect of Cash Turnover Rate, Turnover Rate Loans, Capital Adequacy and Growth in Number of Customers Against Profitability. The sample in this study were 8 of Credit Unions in the village of Sanur. Determination of the number of samples using purposive sampling method. The analytical tool used is multiple linear regression analysis, which previously had been performed classical assumption that consists of normality test, multicollinearity, heteroscedasticity test, autocorrelation test, and hypothesis testing using the test the coefficient of determination (R2), test F and test t, Based on the survey results revealed that the rate of turnover of credit and capital adequacy significant positive effect on profitability, while cash turnover rate and the growth in the number of customers had no significant effect on profitability.

Keywords: Cash turnover, credit turnover, capital adequacy, number of customers, profitability.